Silver Rush, 2019, poured & mirrored glass, 77 x 92 inches

Rob Wynne Speechless

February 21 - March 28, 2020

Opening Reception: Friday, February 21: 5:30-7:30 PM

Locks Gallery is pleased to present Speechless, featuring recent work by New York-based artist Rob Wynne. There will be a reception for the artist on Friday, February 21 from 5:30 to 7:30 pm and the exhibition will continue through March 28, 2020.

For his fifth solo show at the gallery, Wynne will exhibit recent works that explore the elusive nature of language through his use of eccentric materials. As a conceptual artist with interests in literature, painting, sculpture, drawing, embroidery, and glass making, Wynne works in a range of media with a particular interest in a material's ability to transform. His signature wall reliefs are comprised of an abstract cluster of individual hand poured mirrored glass elements, achieved by uniquely pouring each letter or element, followed by a process of cooling and silvering. This transition from liquid to solid takes place for bronze as well. The smoke on vellum work such as 'Where' also stem from this process, as Wynne elaborates:

In order to transport the letters into the cooling oven from the table that they're poured on, they have to be slid onto a piece of wood. And when they're slid onto the wood, the wood catches fire and produces an enormous amount of smoke, which chars the surface of the wood. So it both imprints the letter—"brands it"—into the wood, and it also creates smoke, which is charcoal...I lit a candle and put paper on a piece of Plexiglas, so that I could look through the paper and trap the smoke onto it. So it really is a charcoal drawing.

Central to his exhibition is the idea of looking and how the viewer can be transported to another world. The element of the mirrored surface points to Wynne's interest in the viewer's self-awareness both in the materiality of the piece, as well as on a more contemplative level. Beyond an unusual and glittering quality, the work takes on a poetic subtext. Phrases and words are drawn from diary entries, snippets from poems, and conversations. The themes of Invisibility / transformation are directly referenced in the morphing of the materials - glass when clear, the white text prints, the translucency of the vellum that permits the ability to read the sewn text while looking through to see the threads unravelling.
